BAKING & HOSPITALITY

WINE FEATURE

Taste the difference of wine education

It's date night. You've just sat down at the best table in the restaurant, and the server hands you a weighty, leather-bound book – the wine list. What do you do? Do you nervously scan for a name that sounds familiar? Ask for a recommendation? Or simply hand it back and opt for the "house red"?

Even the most seasoned foodies can be intimidated by a wine list, but when it comes to wine appreciation, a little learning can go a long way. One of VCC's newest credentials, the Wine and Spirits Education Trust (WSET) Level 1 Award in Wines, offered through wine educator Staterra Academy, is the perfect starting point for gaining this lifelong skill.

Keith Nicholson

Like any good VCC instructor, award-winning sommelier Keith Nicholson knows that people learn best by doing – or tasting, as the case may be. "More than half the class is spent with wine in our glasses," he says. "That's the best part.

Overall, the course teaches why different wines taste the way they do, accounting for varietal (type of grape), climate, and the winemaking process. Students in the course range from chefs, restaurant servers and wine store employees to wine-lovers from all walks of life. "More than just a lecture, we connect the dots to what is in the glass," says Keith. "People have a lot of 'aha' moments in this class."

BUSINESS

TECHNICAL WRITING FEATURE

Meet Technical Writing Instructor Stephen Gauer

How long have you been teaching at VCC?

I've been teaching at VCC since 2016.

What is your current career?

I'm a freelance technical writer, currently working on safety and training documentation for Transport Canada.

Share an interesting thing about your journey to reach this moment.

It's been a long, complicated, and strange trip at times. I grew up in suburban Toronto in the 1950s and 1960s, but I learned a lot about life on long hitch-hiking trips across North America and Europe during and after high school.

Stephen Gauer

I've done every kind of writing except marketing and advertising since publishing my first piece in the Globe and Mail in 1975. I published a novel in 2011 (Hold Me Now) which satisfied a decades-long creative dream.

If you could have lunch with anyone, who would it be and why?

Oscar Wilde, because he would make me laugh.

How did you learn the trade?

On the job. The best preparation was print journalism. I was a newspaper reporter for six years in the 1970s, learning how to interview people and write accurately, simply, concisely, and quickly.

Advice for someone starting out in this industry?

Write, write, and write again! Do it for free if you have to. Build a portfolio. Be as versatile a writer as you can possibly be.

Who are your favourite authors?

Somerset Maugham, Herman Melville, and Naomi Klein.

How do you define success?

Peace of mind when I look at my bank account, and a daily sense of accomplishment that the writing I do makes life a little easier for my audience.

What is your writing motto?

Be simple, clear, and brief.

Meet Harpreet Gill, Instructor for Medical Device Reprocessing Technician

Where did you grow up?

I was born and raised in India in a family of great leaders and mentors. Discipline was practiced everywhere in school and at home which instilled some great habits in me to this day. After I finished my Master's degree in science I moved to Canada in 1993.

Where did you learn this trade?

One day while working, a customer started a conversation about my educational background. I mentioned that I was more interested in working in the medical field. He introduced me to the MDR Technician Program. I have a vivid memory of the customer drawing the four areas on a piece of paper and explaining to me the different aspects of this job. I then began my journey and completed my certification as an MDR technician from VCC in 1999. Ever since then, I have been working for the Fraser Health region.

Harpreet Gill

How long have you been teaching at VCC?

I became an instructor with VCC in 2016. I am a third-generation instructor in my family, and I feel very proud to carry on this legacy.

What do you love about teaching?

As an educator, it is my responsibility to prepare the students for their future and the community as their quality of work will tremendously affect human lives. Their confidence and ability to perform all tasks without any guidance is a happy moment for me; I love seeing their success at the end of the course.

Share an interesting thing about your journey to reach this moment.

I was fortunate enough to experience setting up an MDR department from scratch. I felt very honoured to be chosen as a super user of some equipment and was trusted to organize the department and set it up.

How do you personally define success?

To me, success is a combination of discipline and commitment towards your goal. We have all heard the age-old lesson to choose quality over quantity – this fits perfectly in the field of medical device reprocessing.

What is my best advice for someone starting out in this industry?

If you like to serve your community, this is the best way to go. We work as a barrier between the infections, fighting dirt to protect our patients. My motto is to always do the right thing, even when no one is watching.

HUMAN AND FAMILY SERVICES

GLADUE REPORT WRITING FEATURE

New Gladue Report Writing program at VCC

Across Canada, Indigenous people are over-represented in the criminal justice system, and incarceration rates continue to rise. In 1999, a Supreme Court of Canada ruling (R. v. Gladue) established "Gladue" rights, requiring judges to recognize the historical trauma that continues to affect Indigenous offenders in Canada and take racism and systemic discrimination into account during sentencing. Twenty years later, Gladue reports continue to be under-utilized, due to a variety of reasons including a shortage of trained Gladue report writers.

A Gladue report is an individual's 'Sacred Story'. It shares with the courts the personal history and relevant factors that give detail of the individual's life continuum that could possibly give insight to why he/she became involved in the justice system. This sacred information plays an important role in crafting recommendations in accordance to the individual's needs, to assist the judge in making well-informed decisions. It also plays a crucial role in creating a healing journey for the individual.

VCC and consulting firm IndiGenius & Associates have partnered to develop a credentialed Gladue report writing program from an Indigenous perspective, the first of its kind at a post-secondary school in Canada.

"It is truly an honour to be part of a journey in instructing and creating curriculum for Gladue training with VCC, but also in helping pave a path for a national standard in Gladue training for our people," says Mark Marsolais-Nahwegahbow, Founder & President, IndiGenius & Associates. "Despite a majority of reports being court ordered, there hasn't been a program in Canada that has allowed writers to receive a certificate or recognition of credentials to be acknowledged as a professional – until now."

LANGUAGES & WRITING

LANGUAGES FEATURE

Learning about culture is essential to learning a language

By Anton Skripaenko, VCC Russian instructor

A Canadian first visiting Russia might be surprised to see so few people laughing and smiling in the streets and public places. Culturally speaking, however, this somber mood represents good manners. In Russian culture, calmness is politeness, while loud laughter or celebration, and even bright clothing, can draw suspicion and whispers, especially from the elderly.

For those who want to truly learn a foreign language, cultural norms and expectations are often inseparable from grammar and vocabulary. It all comes down to being understood. While in North America, a wide smile and a laugh may be accepted – even expected – in certain social scenarios, visitors to Russia will be wise to keep in mind an old Russian saying, “Laughter for no good reason is a hallmark of a fool,” or run the risk of appearing tactless or rude.

By the same token, in Russia, speaking about your problems is also widely accepted, and Russians are also very quick to offer compassion and help. If you do want to see a Russian smile, just be sincere and genuinely friendly. I promise, it can happen.

WEB AND GRAPHICS FEATURE

Design best practices

Do you manage your own or a business website? Or do you enjoy seeing others read your blog?

Whether it is your own online portfolio, a blog, or a business web page, you can give a boost to its popularity with some design enhancements and feature additions. To provide your users with a valuable user experience, here are some of the top strategies:

Emotional design: use the power of emotional valence to form a positive connection with your site's viewers. Design aesthetics which evoke positive emotions, such as pleasure or trust are shown to influence users' perceptions of a product.

Human-centered design: use a design approach which is centered around an issue and not the symptom; people and not technology; the whole activity and not its isolated components.

Interview: interviewing your customers can identify problems ahead of time and help you focus on what matters most to your site's visitors. In addition to soliciting feedback from your client-base, think about interviewing members of the open-source community and members of your organization, including executives, leadership and management.

Results matter more: think about your users' end-goal. While the user experience is important, focusing on the big picture and the desired result will garner more appreciation from your users.

Responsive design: your users are viewing your website on varying display sizes. Learn responsive design and build web pages that incorporate flexible layouts, images, and style sheet media queries.

Questions: ask meaningful questions before and throughout the design process. Often times designers end up focusing on 'creating' more than anything else. Whilst that is an integral component of the design methodology, you will find the design process to be much easier if you start with a list of answers.

As Don Norman, one of the leading design experts, said, "beauty and brains, pleasure and usability – they should go hand in hand."

Flip the next few pages for hands-on training on using tools and languages such as Adobe Photoshop, InDesign, Illustrator, SEO/Analytics, HTML/CSS, and JavaScript. ■

BUILDING MANAGER FEATURE

Employers hungry for more building service workers

VCC has offered the Building Service Worker (BSW) program for over thirty years. The program is a major component for a variety of Vancouver employers, including the following:

- The City of Vancouver – Parks and Recreation
- Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation (CMHC) – Granville Island
- Science World
- The Vancouver School Board

These employers take time out of their busy schedule to visit with current and past students of the Building Service Worker course, and to encourage a career with their institutions. They provide an opportunity to have a conversation about the roles and responsibilities of a BSW in the care-taking industry. Guest speakers in the BSW course have increased the knowledge of all students with direct questions and answers in an intimate classroom setting. Students have been encouraged to apply for a variety of positions and have been hired more than 95% of the time.

As students are finding employment in this industry within 2 months and with pays ranging from around $15 to $25 per hour, the time is ripe to consider this as one of the strong and stable job choices, or as a stepping stone to building a career in the field of building maintenance.

Taught by experienced professionals, the BSW course provides a two-week practicum opportunity, and certifications in WHMIS and FOODSAFE. Optional courses, such as the Pool Operator Level 1 course, are also a great addition to your skill set.

Find out more at one of our free information sessions and become part of a growing industry that will supply you with a great future.
