87 per cent of college grads find work: report

Each year, thousands of students complete their studies at B.C.'s public colleges and institutes, and each year these former students are asked to assess their college experiences and describe their post-college outcomes.

A survey was conducted in the spring of 1995 for the B.C. Colleges and Institutes Student Outcomes Report. The survey population included only students who had completed academic, career, or vocational studies and left college sometime after July 1, 1993 and before June 30, 1994. The following are some of the results of the report.

Labour Force Outcomes:

Eighty-seven per cent of respondents were in the labour force one year after completing their college studies. Of these, 73 per cent were employed in a full-time job.

For respondents in the labour force, the three program areas resulting in the greatest proportion of full-time employment were: agriculture and natural resources (87 per cent), engineering, electrical and electronics (84 per cent) and construction, mechanics and metal trades (80 per cent).

The three with the smallest proportion were: fine/visual and performing arts (66 per cent), and liberal arts, sciences and humanities (67 per cent).

Of those respondents who were in the labour force one year after completing their college studies, 58 per cent were working in training-related jobs.

For respondents in the labour force, the proportion working in training related jobs was greatest for respondents coming out of certificate programs up to six months in length (93 per cent) and smallest for the lower division degree programs (34 per cent).

For respondents in the labour force, the three program areas with the greatest proportion of respondents employed in a training related job were: health related (84 per cent), agriculture and natural resources (82 per cent) and engineering, electrical and electronic (76 per cent).

The three with the smallest proportion were: liberal arts, sciences and humanities (32 per cent), fine/visual and performing arts (44 per cent) and transportation (59 per cent).

Job salaries for respondents varied widely among the five different program types. Students who completed upper division programs reported earning the highest salaries (a median of $2,650 per month), while those who completed either a short vocational or lower division program earned the lowest (median of $2,000 and $1,750 per month, respectively).

Job salaries for respondents also varied widely. The three program areas where respondents reported earning the highest mean monthly salaries were: transportation, computer and information services and agriculture and natural resources. The three with the smallest salaries reported were: fine/visual and performing arts, recreation and liberal arts/sciences and humanities.

Updated phone directory in the works

Production of the VCC Telephone Directory is scheduled for the end of September 1996. In preparation, a Telephone Directory Worksheet will be distributed to each department in mid-August. The worksheet is a listing of the people in the department with their telephone local and other information that appears in the directory. Please update the worksheet and add any additional information you wish to appear in the next directory (ie. Title/Position). If no changes are required, please return the worksheet with the department head or designate's signature. Please return all worksheets by Friday, September 13, 1996 to my attention.

IBT brings expertise together to help students

The Student Services Division of VCC would like to announce a new service to students under the IBT (Institution Based Training) Initiative. IBT staff will be helping students and prospective students on income assistance (Youth Works and Welfare to Work) prepare for entry to and success at Vancouver Community College. Many exciting initiatives are underway.

Darlene Vuch (local 7001), formerly from the Basic Education Department at KEC, is now a Student Services Assistant for IBT clients at King Edward. Darlene can be found on the 4th Floor, Administrative Offices at KEC.

Wendy Lafrance (local 8637) from the Counselling Department at City Centre, is now working as a Student Services Assistant for IBT clients at City Centre. Wendy can still be found in the Counselling Department at City Centre where she has an office.

Nona Coles (local 8634) is new to VCC and is the IBT transition counsellor. Nona is responsible for assisting IBT graduates on both campuses with job search and the transition to employment.

Brenda Toporowski (local 8442), Community Outreach, will be offering tours and information sessions to prospective students. Brenda is also responsible for maintaining a close relationship with training consultants, social workers and financial aid workers in the Ministries of Education, Skills and Training and Social Services. Brenda will continue to maintain contact with the community.

Wayne Avery (local 8449), formerly Coordinator of Services for Students with Disabilities at City Centre, is now responsible for the coordination of this new support service for students on income assistance.

If you have a student who you think might benefit from this new student service or if you want to know more about IBT, give us a call. Stay tuned for the next issue of Connections for more detailed information on BC Benefits (Youth Works and Welfare to Work) and the Institution Based Training Initiative at VCC.

Government makes job info available free on the Internet

Need to know what career prospects look like for a research scientist, or an office worker, or a psychiatric nurse? How about getting information on how much you might earn as a lab technician? All that information is now available free, courtesy of Human Resources Development Canada, to users of the Internet.

Last week HRDC launched the online version of Job Futures, a two-volume, 780-page profile of career prospects in Canada. Job Futures includes the most current information and analyses of supply and demand in the Canadian job market.

It is aimed at career counsellors, parents and students seeking career guidance, but it will also be a useful tool for unemployed workers and those planning a career change or re-entering the job market.

By 1998, all of Canada's 16,500 schools and 3,400 libraries will have access to the electronic version of Job Futures via SchoolNet. Access will also be available

Clerks under stress studied

Six calls are coming in at once, someone has just dropped off yet another memo they must have typed right now, and you wonder how you're going to afford the coming rent increase.

Sound familiar? You may be a candidate for a study on stress and clerical workers. Dr. Bonita Long of the University of British Columbia Counselling Psychology department hopes to track 300 women in full-time clerical jobs over the next few years. The goal is to find out how much stress they experience, and what strategies they use to cope.

Eventually she hopes to test the successful coping strategies in the workplace. Long already has 97 people enrolled in the program, and is looking for more.

"We're doing the study because clerical work is a category of women that is very seldom seriously studied. I'm not sure why, but as a group of workers, they're not as studied as other groups such as women in management, who have been studied quite extensively in terms of the stress they experience and how they cope with it."

One-third of all working women are in clerical jobs, Long adds, and the scanty research that has been done indicates that they are under considerable stress.

"It's not for the same reasons that women in management generally feel stress. They often feel they have little control over their environment. They are poorly paid, so they feel they're not appreciated. They have lots of demands on them; they have expectations on them that they have good interpersonal skills, but at the same time they feel unappreciated."

Long says she wants to find out if research from the past is valid, then analyze the ways clerical workers deal with stress, good and bad.

Participants are interviewed by a research assistant for an hour to 90 minutes. Then they're required to complete three booklets of questionnaires and keep a daily diary for 15 days. The diary entries should take no longer than 20 minutes a day to complete.

Eventually the results will be published in an academic journal, and each participant will be sent a copy of the report.

Anyone wishing to take part in this study should call research assistants Kamaljit Sidhu or Marlene Barber at 822-9199.

through CanWorkNet, the career and labour market information site HRDC is helping to set up. Members of more than 1,000 rural communities will be linked through the Community Access Program.

Job Futures will also be available in book or CD-ROM format. HRDC will supply libraries and local Human Resource Centres of Canada (formerly Canada Employment Centres) with the hard-copy reference version.

Volume one of Job Futures contains general information on 211 occupational groups that cover all jobs in the country, with specific information on labour market conditions and five-year job projections. Volume Two provides information on the work experience of recent post-secondary graduates and job projections.

You can find Job Futures on the Internet at <http://www.hrdc-drhc.gc.ca>.

Introduce your students to the City Centre Library

The City Centre Library is now taking bookings from instructors for Library Orientations. These orientations are available as half-hour Tours or hour long Labs, and are tailored for each class.

LIBRARY LABS are one hour in length. Students receive information about borrowing privileges and responsibilities as well as a guided tour of the facilities. The Lab includes an introduction to the Library's classification system (how books are arranged in the Library) and hands-on practice looking up books in the computerized catalogue. Library resources relevant to students' area of study are highlighted. The Library now provides access to various online periodical indexes and databases. If your students' research needs include journal articles, a librarian can assist your students with a hands-on training exercise using CD-ROM or online resources.

LIBRARY TOURS are one-half hour long. As in the Lab, students receive introductory information tailored to the content of the class and a guided tour through the Library. They are shown the Library catalogue and areas of the Library where they will find materials relevant to their course of study.

All new students should have an introduction to the campus Library near the beginning of their program. Please phone the Library Information Desk at 443-8339 to schedule Tours or Labs for your classes.

VCC builds upon unique relationship with the Singaporean community

On March 29th His Excellency Kausikan Bilahari, High Commissioner Canada and the United Nations for the Republic of Singapore travelled to Vancouver from New York. His mission: to join in the formal inauguration of the Canada Singapore Business Association. The Association, which evolved from the Business Committee of the Vancouver Singapore Club, has the objective of facilitating the development of business and trading relationships between Canada and Singapore.

The inaugural ceremonies were attended by many prominent people in the life of Vancouver and Singapore including Mayor Philip Owen, Judge Nathan Nemetz (Honourary Consul General of Canada to the Republic of Singapore), K.E. Mathews and VCC President John Cruickshank. Assisting Mr. Bilahari in the inauguration was Canadian Secretary of State, Asia Pacific, Hon. Raymond Chan.

Continuing Education's Brian Cole, 1st Vice President of the B.C. Chapter of the Association, and a Director of the national organization commented, "VCC has developed a good working relationship with this organization. With their board holding their monthly meeting at KEC, VCC enjoys a unique position among educational establishments. VCC has created a lot of goodwill among the Singaporean Community in the Lower Mainland. There are 8,000 to 10,000 family units that have immigrated to B.C. from Singapore, mostly living in greater Vancouver. One of the priorities of new arrivals is education and we're well positioned to obtain a significant share of their Community College enrollments. I'm personally aware of a number of people who have signed up for both full time and CE courses."

Brian Cole, Continuing Education

New BC school computer program

British Columbia's public school system is expanding the basics of education to include computer literacy for all students and teachers. In an ambitious five-year goal, B.C. will spend $100 million to improve access to technology in the class-room and encourage businesses to invest more in high-tech training. The five-year goal is computer literacy for all teachers, and equal access to computers for all students. Highlights of the B.C. Plan: Education ministry will set standards for teacher competency in technology. School districts will be required to identify their teacher training needs. Ministry will provide more resources to help teachers integrate technology in classrooms, such as on-line courses for teachers and electronic versions of the new curriculum. Businesses will provide teachers with short-term work experience placements in high-tech industries. A key part of the new scheme is the participation of leading computer and communications companies, such as Apple Canada, IBM Canada, Sun Microsystems and B.C. Telephone. Apple has agreed to provide a series of "technology camps" for teachers, and is also developing new educational software. IBM will spend $200,000 working with the B.C. ministry of education to develop an intermediate math and science program.

Communication of information to the College community by voice mail

You will all be familiar with the voice mail "message of the day" and most of you will remember that several years ago we used the #7099 Exchange number to provide timely information and updates requiring a little more explanation. The 7099 number has been resurrected as a "Bulletin" information line, but when there is a bulletin, you will receive notice of the fact through a brief reference on the Message of the Day. Guidelines and Procedures for the communication of messages on either of these systems are provided here, for your information and use.

Procedures for Message of the Day

Purpose

To establish an approval process for requests to place a "message of the day" on the College voice mail system.

Guidelines

1. The message must be relevant to the majority of the audience.
2. The message must have a significant time-dependence. Use other means, e.g. Connections, if time is not necessarily of the essence.
3. The message must be as brief and concise as possible (can be read in under 20 seconds).
4. The message must be non-political and non-partisan.
5. Priority will be given to messages according to urgency, educational focus, size of audience and timeliness.
6. A lengthier, more detailed message may be placed on the "Bulletin" Information voice mailbox number #7099.

Procedures

1. Any request must be forwarded to the Telephone Systems Manager (Christie Wagner), in the form of a written memo, fax or e-mail.

2. The request should include explanatory comments, and requested date/time message is to be placed on the system and the date/time the message is to be removed from the system.
3. Christie Wagner will e-mail the President's Office with details of the request and with ICS's recommendations re: technical difficulties, timing, suggested abbreviation of a lengthy message, etc.
4. The final decision as to appropriateness is made in the President's Office.
5. The President's Office communicates the final decision via e-mail to Christie Wagner, for action.
6. A lengthy, detailed message will be processed in the same way, but Christie would make reference to its existence on the 7099 mailbox number in a brief "message of the day."
7. If requested, the initiator of the "Bulletin" message may record the message. Christie Wagner will provide the instructions.

AMTEC expresses appreciation to Michael Agrios and VCC

We received the following, very complimentary letter from the Association for Media and Technology in Education in Canada:

"On behalf of the Board of Directors and membership of the Association for Media and Technology in Education in Canada, I want to thank you for the institutional support you provided in bringing the AMTEC '96 conference to Vancouver in June. As you know, Michael Agrios provided remarkable leadership to the conference team, and without such inspired leadership and your institution's support, the conference would not have been possible.

"In AMTEC, we are fortunate to have leaders like Michael Agrios in our membership. The Board of Directors is also quite aware of the indirect support given us from Vancouver Community College, and for this, we are most grateful. We have taken steps through our newsletter, listserv and web site to thank Vancouver Community College publicly for all you have done for us."

(signed)

Dr. Richard A. Schwier,
President, AMTEC

(Thanks, Michael, for your efforts and for putting VCC in such a good light.

For employees who are planning retirement

If you are considering retiring in the next year and you have been contributing to the College/Municipal Pension Plans, we encourage you to begin the process by contacting the Superannuation Commission at least one year before your actual date of retirement. It takes four to six months from the time you contact the Commission to the date of receipt of the pension documents.

The Municipal Contributor statements have already been distributed to the plan members. We have been informed by the Superannuation Commission that the College Contributor statements will be available to its members in late Fall (October/November). These statements provide pension projections for those 45 years of age and older and is a good base of information from which to plan while waiting for the complete set of documents.

Previously representatives from the Superannuation Commission travelled throughout the province to conduct interviews with individual pension plan members. This service is no longer available. However, representatives from the Commission will schedule presentations at locations where groups of retiring plan members can be addressed at one time. If you are considering retiring and would be interested in participating in a group session next year, please call Personnel Services, indicating the preferred month(s) and time (i.e. morning or afternoon). We will be in touch with you later.

The Commission also provides telephone interviews to answer individual questions. Upon receipt of your pension documentation you may call their Vancouver telephone number (660-4088 for College Pension; and 660-5366 for Municipal Pension) to make arrangements for a mutually agreeable date and time for a telephone interview with one of their counsellors to address your specific questions.

If you require further assistance, please contact Bonnie Baty, Director of Personnel Services at 871-7135 or Daisy Sukhia at 871-7019.

Notice of Board Meetings

Future Board meetings will start at 5:00 p.m. and are held in Room 240, City Centre Campus or Room 5025, King Edward Campus.

- September 26, CC
- October 24, KEC
- November 28, CC
- December 12, location TBA (subject to Board approval)
