STUDENTS, COURSES AND INSTRUCTORS

Early in the term it is the responsibility of each instructor to explain to students the substance of the course content and the style of instruction in which the course is to be offered.

Please help students by:

- a) Summarizing the content of the course and describing the organization.
- b) Describing your personal approach to instruction and students.
- c) Clarifying your expectations of students and your methods of assessing their work.
- d) Informing them of your office hours and other availabilities.
- e) Explaining the grading system.

Your assistance in this matter will help to show students that the provision of a good learning situation is most important to us.

ASSESSMENT OF STUDENT PROGRESS

It is important that all students know how their work is being evaluated. If you are teaching a course, please assist all students by doing the following:

- a) Assess their progress regularly in a manner clearly understandable by them.
- b) Keep them continually informed of their progress.
- c) Explain the grading system early in the term. Please note especially the last date for withdrawals and the reason for it.
- d) Please make sure that students understand how much essays, projects, tests and examinations during the term, and how much the examination at the end of the term, constitute towards the final grade.

FROM THE LIBRARY:

Library Access Asks:

"What is EARTHY ALCHEMY?"

Library Access answers:

"Check it out in the library. You might be a little bit surprised."

Also - Is anybody out there into hobbies where you have materials left over? If you are planning on throwing these out, or keeping them forever, I'd appreciate having them - styrofoam, wool, burlap, anything!

Or, if you have any ideas or talents to offer the library, I'd love to hear of them. I may be here for May and June only, but I'm planning from May to April of next year. Thanks everyone.

Have you figured out what EARTHY ALCHEMY is yet???

PLEDGES ANYONE?

Pat York, a Vancouver blind athlete and former KEC student, recently completed the Vancouver International Marathon in fine style. (He is the 400 metre Olympic and world record holder). Pat accepted the "Marathon Challenge" in conjunction with the United Nations' Year of the Disabled Person.

Pat would appreciate your financial support for the Canadian Blind Sports Association in the form of a donation _____¢ $_____ per mile run in the Marathon (that's 26 + miles!). See Faye Rice in the Administration office with your pledges.
