VANCOUVER COMMUNITY COLLEGE

After the turkey and gifts, but before the New Year is rung in, Vancouver Community College's 1986 part-time courses winter flyer will be dropped in your mail box. This offers a wealth of opportunities to get 1986 off to a great start. In a job rut? Try our business administration certificate program. This program is geared to men and women who work. Evening programs offer a broad curriculum in basic management skills. You can increase your effectiveness on the job and your potential to move ahead.

Do you suffer micro-phobia? If the onslaught of computer technology makes you nervous, at VCC we have the cure. There are more than 40 different computer courses geared to your particular needs. You learn the skills you need by actually working at your own microcomputer. We stress practical, "hands on" training, rather than theory.

We have evening and Saturday courses in the trades and technical field, as well as in secretarial and office administration.

On the lighter side, we offer a Gulf Islands Natural History cruise, wine tasting courses and seminars on personal financial investment:

Break away from the ordinary next year. At Vancouver Community College we offer hundreds of exciting, reasonably priced opportunities!

If a flyer doesn't arrive in your mail, check with your nearest library or community centre for copies.

Among the students receiving recognition for their achievement at Langara Campus November 27 was Chan Man Ho, a student in computer information systems, who was awarded a scholarship from Xerox. Chan came to Canada from Macau in 1981. He knew no English and he has severely impaired vision. For two years he studied math and English in King Edward Campus's adult special education program for the visually impaired. He then went on to study more math and computer science in the high school completion program. At the same time, he held down a fulltime job to help support his family. He is now in the last term of this program at Langara Campus. His remarkable success is a tribute to his determination and motivation.

At the end of November Vancouver Community College wrapped up another successful United Way campaign, taking the college over the top of its '85 goal. This year's target was set at $24,000 and the total came in at $25,275. College campaign co-ordinator Dr. Richard Pearce paid tribute to the efforts of organizers at the campuses, particularly those who put so much time and effort into the United Way 24-hour marathon and the pancake breakfast.

At Vancouver Vocational Institute's graduation ceremony December 5 Ross Bailey, a 1984 graduate in computer electronics, became the first student to receive the Principal's Medal. Bailey was at the top of the dean's list for academic achievement and he is a volunteer sound technician for a community choir, "The Maple Singers". He works for CN/CP Telecommunications.

Continuing Education's coordinator for early childhood education programs, Gyda Chud, is the author, along with Ruth Fahlman, Reena Baker, and Patricia Wakefield, of a recently published book, "Early Childhood Education for a Multi-Cultural Society". The book helps pre-school educators meet some of the challenges faced in providing for the needs of children from a wide range of backgrounds and cultures.

Three enterprising Langara Campus graduates have put out a new cook book just in time for the Christmas market. Mother Grace Taylor, a realty appraisal graduate, along with daughters Wendy Rogers, a graduate in art-in-merchandising, and Lauren Armstrong, an arts and science graduate, drew on their love of local seafood and their fondness for the Sunshine Coast to create this cooking treasury, "Seafood of the Sunshine Coast". Rogers did the calligraphy and the drawings for the beautifully-illustrated book. It is available for $12.95 at the Langara Campus bookstore and a number of others throughout the Lower Mainland.

VVI a la carte cooking student Mee-Ja Young was recently presented with a bursary in recognition of her efforts in assisting fellow cooking student Brian Blais. Mee-Ja helped Brian, who is deaf, by translating instructions into sign language, when his regular interpreter wasn't there. Mee-Ja, who came to Canada from Korea when she was nine, first learned to sign the alphabet when she was 10.

V.C.C. CHRISTMAS CONCERT

The largest audience in a number of years attended the 12th Annual Christmas Coral Concert at the Langara Campus. There was hardly a seat, or a space in the bleachers, vacant when the concert began (the auditorium at King Edward Campus could hardly hold the Healey Willan Choir, the Madrigal Singers and the Vancouver Philharmonic Orchestra alone). The concert, with works by Mozart, Norman Luboff and Vaughan-Williams, was a very pleasant blend of the classical and the modern. Performance, at a very high level, was enthusiastically acclaimed by the audience.
