SEXUAL ASSAULT SEMINAR

In response to your concerns, Vancouver Community College has arranged with the Vancouver Police Department to address our female employees on the subject of sexual assault.

Constable Doug Lang of the Community Relations Department will be holding a short seminar on the subject at each of our three campuses. The VVI date will be Wednesday May 8, 1985 in the Assembly Room (240) from 2:00 to 3:30.

Those female employees wishing to attend but who are on duty at that time must make suitable arrangements for release time through their department heads or office managers.

Noonhour film for April 30 : THE DENTIST

A laugh riot, considered Field's best. He plays golf, dumps his clubs and caddy into a lake, drills teeth, and insults patients in this outrageously funny film. Here is the malicious Fields as a golf-playing dentist who delights in his talent for giving insults and injuries to all with whom he must deal.

FROM THE MINISTRY

Victoria -- Education Minister Jack Heinrich today announced a $5.8 million fund to finance college and institute projects which contribute to economic development in their areas. Heinrich said the funding is designed to encourage colleges and institutes to develop innovative and imaginative training programs. "There's a tremendous wealth of talent and potential within our network of colleges and institutes," Heinrich said. "I intend to tap that reservoir of expertise in determining how to allocate this $5.8 million.

Heinrich said $1.4 million will be earmarked for grants to help operations of satellite centres in interior colleges, $3 million will go to help develop new, high-priority programs and to buy equipment to improve productivity, and $2.4 million will be set aside to help maintain levels of service at the colleges and institutes.

The minister said the door is wide open for institutes in terms of the kinds of projects which might qualify under the $5.8 million fund. "Our aim is to encourage creative development programs that will allow colleges and institutes to build on their particular strengths and expertise, matching them with the needs of local industry and business," the Minister said.

Examples could include projects that could provide specialized service training to resource industries, projects that help in the transfer of skills and technology to the business community or projects that could help improve production of goods and services. Heinrich said it is anticipated some of the projects could involve other provincial ministries and have federal involvement through agencies such as Canada Employment and Immigration. The Minister added he also wants to see proposals that entail the involvement of municipal governments and the province's small business sector and entrepreneurs.

RE: Tutor Orientation Package
DATE: April 17, 1985

The Open Learning Institute has just published a Tutor Orientation Package for instructors in distance education. We believe that this Package will be a valuable resource for any educational institution offering home study courses, as it provides detailed guidelines and skill-development opportunities for non-classroom teaching.

The Course Manuals are entitled:

Tutor Administration Manual
Tutor Orientation Manual
Tutoring by Telephone
Audio Teleconferencing for Distance Education Tutors
Assessing Student Assignments through Grades & Comments

The Package also includes 8 audio tapes which are presented in an 8 1/2 x 11 cassette holder. On these tapes, OLI tutors and several external specialists, provide helpful comments and suggestions on all topics covered by the print material.

All components are contained in a 3-ring binder. One complete Tutor Orientation Package would be an excellent reference item. Multiple copies of the manuals and tapes, which focus on specific skills, would be useful for distribution to instructors who have responsibilities in distance teaching.

Price for the complete Package is $45.00 for B.C. Educational Institutions. Please give us a call if you would like one or more copies for your institution.

For Those of You Who Missed the "West Ender" last week . . .

Last week Vancouver Community College's spring and summer flyer, detailing more than 600 part-time courses, was dropped in every Vancouver mail box. If, by any chance, you didn't receive your copy, you can pick one up at the nearest community centre, library, or VCC campus. VCC offers top quality programs, that range from business and the trades, to travel, music, art and writing. Do your mind a favour. Look through the VCC spring and summer flyer! Courses are competitively priced. You can pay by cash, cheque or Visa.

Vancouver Community College recently named its top women's and men's athletes for 1984-85. Taking the honours for the women were Langara Campus basketball stars Sue Macpherson and Leah Ellis. MacPherson was named to the all-Canada team at the women's national championships, held in Saskatchewan at the end of March. This ranks her as one of the top ten women players in Canada. Leah Ellis was named to the all-star team at the championships. Their team lost the national championship by one point in overtime. Top ranked VCC men were Langara Campus basketball stars Marty Lutz and Jay Derksen. Lutz was named to the all-Canada team at the Saskatchewan national championships, while Derksen was named to the all-star team at the championships. The men's team placed fourth at the nationals.

Last week Vancouver Mayor Mike Harcourt spoke at Langara Campus, concluding lecture series "Canada's Neighbours in Asia." This series, which began in September, has featured guest speakers from throughout the Pacific Rim. It was jointly sponsored by Vancouver Community College's Pacific Rim Program and by the Canadian International Development Agency.

Congratulations to instructors and students in the food trades program at the college's Vancouver Vocational Institute. They took a number of silver and bronze medals at the B.C. Chefs' Association Culinary Arts Show, held recently in Robson Square Media Centre.

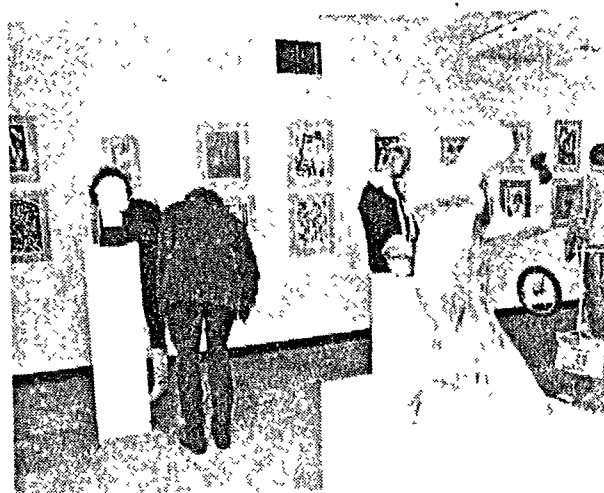

In March Vancouver Community College took part in an educational fair in Hong Kong, along with 31 other institutions from Canada, the U.S., Switzerland, England and Australia. The college's director of International Education, Norm Henderson, reported more than 16,000 visitors attended the three day fair. This fall, for the first time, the college will open its doors to about 50 overseas students from Hong Kong, who will take high school completion through the College Foundations division of King Edward Campus. In addition, overseas students can now compete for positions in other college programs. All programs for foreign students are offered on a cost-recovery basis. That is, there is no government subsidy to offset the tuition paid by the individual.

Career Awareness is a program run by Continuing Education, that combines life skills and job experience for mentally handicapped adults. At a recent graduation ceremony for 16 participants, Norman Gould of the Vancouver Kiwanis Club presented the program with two micro-computers. These will be used by students in the program to upgrade their basic literacy and numeric skills.

Brian Dwyer, of Vancouver Vocational Institute's program development department, left March 29 to undertake a special contract, through the Canadian International Development Agency, with International Rail Consultants. He will act as an educational consultant for railway manpower training systems in Tanzania and Kenya.

King Edward Campus's diesel mechanics program is continuing VCC's tradition of cooperation with business and industry. The department recently began a pilot service skills training program for Fanning Tractor and Equipment, that will provide the company's apprentices with an intensive two week course on Caterpillar equipment. The program was designed in cooperation with Fanning's training division.

Vancouver Vocational Institute's hairdressing department is offering new programs in electrolysis and skin care, beginning in May. For clients at VVI salon, located on the campus at 250 West Pender St., this means a whole new regime of services is available, among them silk and artificial nails, cellulite treatments, aromatherapy and hair removal. All work is done by students under the supervision of instructors with many years of experience. For more information call the hairdressing department at 681-8111.

The last week of March the fine arts department at Langara Campus staged its spring show. The department's studios and corridors became a gallery with displays of painting, drawing, sculpture, ceramics, design and prints. At the awards, staged in conjunction with the four day show, Kathaleen Neufeld took the prize for over all achievement in the first year of the program, while Jim Gislosen took the achievement award for the second year of the program.

For Immediate Release

Canadians interested in a career in the hotel and tourism industry can now attend an international school in Switzerland where all classes are taught in English. Graduates qualify to work anywhere in the world. The Hotel and Tourism School, HOSTA, is one of the few schools in existence authorized by the International Air Transport Association/Universal Federation of Travel Associations to give the official Travel Agents Course. HOSTA offers programmes in Hotel Administration, Advanced Hotel Management, Travel and Tourism. Their studies prepare students for direct entry into valuable career positions in the Hotel and Tourism/Travel Agency Operations.

Canadians will attend school with students from as many as forty different countries around the world. Although the courses are taught in English, as part of their curriculum, students will study French and either German, Italian or Spanish.

In the hotel courses, HOSTA trains students exclusively to work in the administrative and executive areas of the business. Theory and practice are mixed so that students acquire the knowledge and skills necessary to succeed in a career in the hotel industry. The HOSTA diploma is recognized by leading hoteliers, as evidenced by the high esteem attributed to it's graduates.

The Travel and Tourism Programmes give both the Standard and Advanced IATA/UFTAA Courses in a single nine month academic year. In recent years students have had an extremely high rate of success in passing the official examinations. The examinations are administered by IATA/UFTAA. Graduating students receive the IATA/UFTAA International Travel Consultant's Diploma as well as the HOSTA Diploma; both are recognized throughout the world.
