High tech is the new language of car talk

The computer evolution has transformed the garage grease monkey with busted knuckles into a whitecoat-technician with electronic interrogation on his mind.

From the fuel that burns in our engines to the exhaust that comes out the pipe, today's car is a microprocessor-controlled system.

The Transportation and Equipment Technology for the 90s trade show attracted 2500 people to the KEC Mechanical Trades Centre where 90 exhibitors from government and industry displayed their latest technological wares alongside

Lewindon with electronic interrogation system that was displayed at the trade examples of the new training techniques being used at the college.

"This was our second annual show and it was a great success," said Sam Lewindon, Careers Division Chairman. "Our students today must be analytical, creative thinkers with a strong math and science background. This was an opportunity to give them exposure to the marketplace where they'll be employed once they graduate.

"We also hosted a lot of students and their teachers from high school trades programs who weren't aware of everything we offer."

Music for the multi-track mind

For those with a multi-track musical mind, A Night at the Commodore promises a variety of sounds from noted international artists--and an opportunity for your night out to help the VCC Scholarships for Music Fund.

The night of music--featuring Ralph Cole, Shari Ulrich, Fifth Avenue and The Melloyds--will be held Sunday, November 19, starting at 7:30.

Cole is a former member of the Nylons who established himself in Vancouver with critically acclaimed performances in Cats and Ain't Misbehavin'. He teaches singing at Langara's Studio 58 and instructs voice in the KEC Music Department.

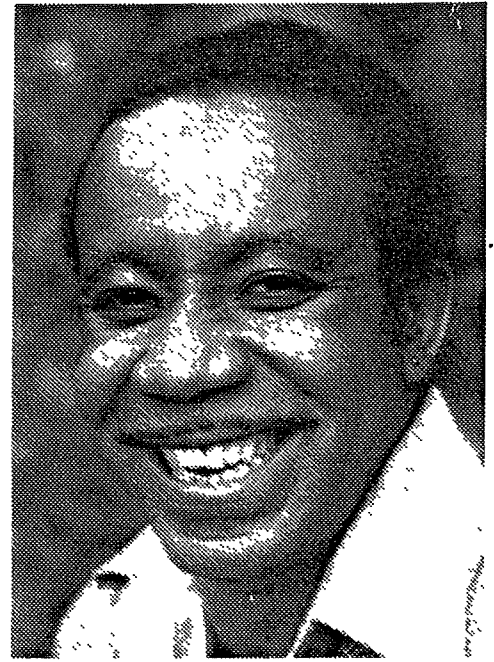

Ulrich, a two-time Juno Award winner who has toured Canada and the U.S., is currently releasing her fourth solo album, "Every Road".

The Melloyds are Vancouver's "shoobop" quartet, noted for blending their a cappella harmonies and original arrangements with favourites from the 50s and 60s.

Fifth Avenue members have been together for only a year, but they won the CBC/Alcan Festival International de Jazz in Montreal in July. They followed up that performance by opening for Oscar Peterson at Montreal's Place des Arts and will be soon be releasing a compact disc and album for the CBC Jazz Image label.

Fifth Avenue member Alan Matheson teaches jazz history at VCC.

Tickets for A Night at the Commodore, at $25, can be purchased at all Ticketmaster locations, or by phone, 280-4444 or phone Donna at the VCC Educational Foundation, 875-1131, local 329.

Featured performers for the November 19th show are Ralph Cole, Shari Ulrich, The Melloyds and winners of the Alcan Jazz Festival, Fifth Avenue. A photo of Fifth Avenue was not available at press time.

Chris Akin

Chris has your number

Can you remember ten phone numbers? Five? Your own?

Meet Chris Akin, the phone number phenomenon from the switchboard at Langara. Chris can usually remember every phone local on the campus, a total of over 300 combinations.

Ever forget one?

"Sometimes if I get a call for somebody who hasn't been phoned for a long time, but then I usually remember it after that," said Chris.

Simple as one, two, three...

Second Year Dental Hygiene student Jennifer Nistor talks to a visitor at the October 19 dental hygiene "table clinic" held in the main mall at VVI. These clinics are held regularly as an educational service to the public.

Introducing Mind Market

Do you have an idea or innovation you want to share? Looking for expertise to assist in a college project? Want to just get together with like-minded educators or support people to mull over concepts for the classroom or the college as a whole?

Introducing Mind Market, a classified section for ideas. Our first ad is space-age:

I would like to form an adhoc committee of anyone interested in developing lectures/programs for satellite transmission via the new Asian satellite to and from counterparts in Pacific Rim locations. Contact Bob Lajoie (875-8200, local 240 or Glen Witter, 641-1316).

If you'd like to use Mind Market, send your ad to Cathy Nishikawa, Public Relations & Development, Central Admin.
